Australian and New Zealand Standard Product Classification (ANZSPC)

Preface

EMBARGO: 11:30 AM (CANBERRA TIME) 14/06/2001

The Australian and New Zealand Standard Product Classification (ANZSPC) has been produced by the Australian Bureau of Statistics (ABS) and Statistics New Zealand for the collection and presentation of product statistics in both countries. It replaces the Australian and New Zealand Standard Commodity Classification (ANZSCC). The development of the ANZSPC resulted from the need to update the ANZSCC to include new products and services. In addition, it was decided to align the classification closely with the latest international standards for product classification, presented in the Central Product Classification Version 1.0 (CPC) published by the United Nations Statistics Division in 1998, to provide international comparability. Particular attention has been given to expanding and improving the services part of the classification and adapting the CPC Version 1.0 to Australian and New Zealand conditions. In preparing this classification, considerable effort has gone into ensuring that the classification reflects the current business/technology environment, and provides a sound basis for updating the classification in the future, as necessary.

Where appropriate, correspondences have been developed with existing classifications, such as the ANZSCC and CPC Version 1.0.

Chapter 1: About the classification

Introduction

EMBARGO: 11:30 AM (CANBERRA TIME) 14/06/2001

1 The Australian and New Zealand Standard Product Classification (ANZSPC) has been developed for use in Australia and New Zealand for the collection and presentation of product statistics for goods and services. It replaces the Australian and New Zealand Standard Commodity Classification (ANZSCC)¹ which has been in use since 1996.

2 The ANZSPC continues the strategy of the ANZSCC in the progressive implementation of international Central Product Classification (CPC)² standards in the statistical series of the two agencies. These standards have been applied to the maintenance and development of product items collected for some years and are reflected in the way they are presented in the ANZSPC, and the level of alignment with the international standard.

3 There has been extensive consultation to ensure that the ANZSPC reflects the structure of both the Australian and New Zealand economies in terms of production, and requirements for statistics. The ABS and SNZ encourage other organisations to use the classification in their own systems, to improve the comparability and usefulness of product statistics.

4 In the development of the ANZSPC, strong emphasis has been placed on alignment with international standards. The CPC Version 1.0 provides the basis for the classification and links are provided to other international standard classifications to aid the comparability of product statistics both nationally and internationally. A more detailed background on the historical development of international product classifications can be found in the introduction to the CPC.

5 Whereas the ANZSCC was based upon the Provisional CPC³, the ANZSPC is based upon the later CPC Version 1.0 which better reflects contemporary standards in product classification. Like the ANZSCC, the ANZSPC follows the CPC to the lowest level of detail possible consistent with Australian and New Zealand requirements. At a minimum, the ANZSPC aligns with CPC Version 1.0 categories at the Group (3 digit) level. However, lower level alignment has been achieved for most CPC Version 1.0 categories. Australia and New Zealand have agreed that each national statistical agency can create items below the Subclass level to meet national statistical requirements. These issues are discussed in more detail in Structure and layout of the classification, below.

6 All ANZSPC product categories are linked to the appropriate categories of the ANZSIC⁴, the CPC Version 1.0, the Standard Industrial Trade Classification (SITC) Revision 3⁵ and the Harmonized System (HS)⁶. As any of these classifications are updated, the links to the ANZSPC will be updated.

7 The ANZSPC will not remain static at its detailed level. Categories will be revised as statistical requirements change and other changes will follow national and international research which shows changes to the local and world economies, and the emergence of new products or changes in the nature of existing products.

8 The Australian Bureau of Statistics and Statistics New Zealand will assist users to interpret and use the classification for their own purposes. Users are encouraged to discuss their requirements with either agency.

Chapter 1: About the classification

International developments

EMBARGO: 11:30 AM (CANBERRA TIME) 14/06/2001

9 The United Nations and other international organisations, in association with the customs departments and statistical agencies of major trading nations, have developed an interrelated set of classifications of economic activities and products. These comprise the International Standard Industrial Classification of all Economic Activities (ISIC) Revision 3⁷, the HS⁶, the SITC Revision 3⁵ and the CPC Version 1.0². As part of the programme of harmonisation of major classifications, the ABS, SNZ and other major national and international statistical agencies are progressively rebasing their classification systems to align with these international standards as closely as possible, thereby facilitating international data comparisons. For example, the Australian and New Zealand Standard Industrial Classification (ANZSIC)⁴ will be revised to take account of changes expected to be made in the ISIC, and already made in the North American Industry Classification System (NAICS)⁸, and the United States of America, Canada and Mexico are developing the North American Product Classification System (NAPCS) which will be based on the CPC.

10 For goods typically subject to international trade, and consequently to customs administration, the HS is, under international convention, the standard which describes them.

11 As signatory countries to the HS Convention, Australia and New Zealand, and hence the ABS and SNZ, have a mandatory responsibility to collect and publish import and export product statistics according to the most detailed (six-digit) level of the HS without deviation. The consistency introduced to international trade statistics is reflected in the 5124 HS 6-digit codes and descriptions which are identical for both import and export statistics and are stable over time⁹. These are a minimum list of items. Australian trade statistics are available at finer levels of detail presented in the Combined Australian Customs Tariff and Statistical Nomenclature (Customs Tariff)¹⁰ and The Australian Harmonized Export Commodity Classification (AHECC)¹¹. Trade data in New Zealand are classified by the New Zealand Harmonised System (NZHS)¹² which applies to both imports and exports as a single 10 digit classification.

12 The Standard International Trade Classification Revision 3 (SITC) regroups HS categories into 3118 headings. It is designed to aid statistical analysis of trade data and to assist in the compilation of comparable trade data.

13 The CPC has been developed as a multipurpose classification covering all goods and services (the HS and SITC classify goods only). It has been designed to bring together, into a single framework, products (whether goods or services) that can be the object of domestic or international transactions, or that can be entered into stocks. Also included are non-produced assets such as land, and assets arising from legal contracts (e.g. patents, trademarks and copyrights).

14 The goods categories of the CPC can be directly linked to the HS and the SITC Revision 3. Consequently, comparison between the data compiled using any of these classifications is possible. As all the SITC and the CPC goods categories are composed of one or more HS categories, the Explanatory Notes to the HS also provide the documentation for the definition of the scope of individual SITC and CPC categories. It should be noted however that when attempting to link the respective classifications there is not always a 1:1 or a many:1 correspondence between the same items in different classifications.

15 The only direct correspondence for the non-transportable goods and services component of the ANZSPC (Sections 5-9) to related product classifications, is with the CPC because the CPC is the first classification to incorporate services into a single unified product framework. However, correspondences to trade in services may be indirectly ascertained via the correspondences between CPC Version 1.0 and the Extended Balance of Payments Services (EBOPS) Classification contained in the Manual on Statistics of International Trade in Services (Draft)¹³.

Chapter 1: About the classification

Purpose and scope of the ANZSPC

EMBARGO: 11:30 AM (CANBERRA TIME) 14/06/2001

16 The ANZSPC provides a framework for the grouping of all goods and services produced in the Australian and New Zealand economies. In so doing, it aids the:

- comparability between production, import and export statistics
- links between products and the industries that produce them
- comparability between Australian, New Zealand and international statistics
- the compilation of product data for National Accounts; and
- construction of alternate views based on product rather than industry

17 Like the CPC², the ANZSPC presents product categories for goods and services within a complete classification. While expecting that it would occur infrequently, Australia and New Zealand agreed that each country would be able to create items below the Subclass (five digit) level to meet national statistical requirements in presenting both current collection items and providing the basis for definition of future collection items. This approach is aimed at ensuring that the classification will accommodate future statistical requirements as well as those identified at the release of the classification.

Australian and New Zealand Standard Product Classification (ANZSPC).*Chapter 1: About the classification*Structure and layout of the classification

EMBARGO: 11:30 AM (CANBERRA TIME) 14/06/2001

18 The ANZSPC follows the structure of the CPC² to its Group (three-digit) level, with a only a few exceptions¹⁴. Most exceptions are either aggregations or disaggregations of CPC Groups, resulting from significant user requirements or local data supply problems. Other exceptions anticipate structural changes to the next version of the CPC arising from current research¹⁵. In a few cases, minor changes to headings have been made, though these do not affect the scope of the Groups concerned¹⁶.

19 Harmonisation between Australia and New Zealand has been achieved at the Subclass (five - digit) level with only two exceptions. Group 531 Buildings differs in its treatment between the two countries due to local user requirements such that harmonisation is only possible at the Group (three-digit) level. Below this level the individual countries diverge.

20 Harmonisation between Australia and New Zealand of Division 81 Research and Development Services was not possible because of different user requirements in each country. The Australian structure detailed in the body of the classification corresponds to the CPCV1.0 to the Class (four-digit) level. The detailed levels are based on the Research Fields, Courses and Disciplines (RFCD) Classification contained in the Australian Standards Research Classification (ASRC)¹⁷. The NZ structure, is available as an Annex and is based on the purpose of the research being undertaken.

21 The first five levels (1 digit per level) of the classification represent, with a few exceptions detailed above, the Section, Division, Group, Class and Subclass level of the CPC. Further levels (up to three levels of two digits each) of the classification represent the local Australian and New Zealand levels of the classification. These levels may or may not equate to CPC Classes or Subclasses and are generally referred to as items.

22 The layout of the classification is illustrated in the following example where 7 is the Section, 72 is the Division, 722 is the Group, 7222 is the Class, 72222 is the Subclass and 72222.10, 72222.20 and 72222.90 are items.

Determination of individual product items

EMBARGO: 11:30 AM (CANBERRA TIME) 14/06/2001

23 The most detailed categories of the ANZSPC (seven, nine or eleven digits) are determined by a combination of factors. Statistical user requirements are a prime factor, but any proposal for a product is subject to the requirement that the product align as closely as possible with the detailed Subclass (five digit) level of the CPC². Alignment to the Group (three digit) level of the CPC is an absolute minimum requirement unless special circumstances apply.

Chapter 1: About the classification

Correspondences with other classifications

EMBARGO: 11:30 AM (CANBERRA TIME) 14/06/2001

24 Correspondences are provided with the classification containing two way correspondence tables between ANZSPC items and related items of the ANZSCC¹ ANZSIC⁴, HS⁶, SITC⁵ and CPC². Correspondences between different classifications identify the relationship between respective categories. An item in one classification can be equivalent to one or more whole or part items in another classification.

25 Correspondences to the underlying international standard product classifications (the CPC, the HS and the SITC) are provided to aid both the determination of the scope of individual categories (via the explanatory notes to the HS and the CPC) and the level to which individual ANZSPC categories can be related to individual categories of those classifications.

26 In particular, the correspondences linking ANZSIC industries of origin to ANZSPC items are included to assist those wishing to analyse the product coverage of ANZSIC industries. However, care needs to be taken in relating product statistics to their industry of origin. ABS industry statistics are based upon information from businesses classified to their main industrial activity. This means that any secondary industrial activity by a business will be accounted for under its primary industry classification. Therefore, product aggregates calculated on an industry of origin basis will not necessarily be compatible with official industry statistics. This concept is explained further in the introduction to the ANZSIC.

27 A correspondence linking ANZSPC items to ANZSCC items is also included to assist in comparing Australian and New Zealand product statistics over time.

28 A correspondence does not necessarily enable exact comparability between data compiled according to different classification schemes. The main issue in using correspondences is in knowing how to treat part relationships. This usually involves determining the scope of the categories under consideration in both classifications and determining which components of the categories are shared in common. For example, some ANZSPC items are the direct equivalent of HS items, while many are either combinations of HS items or dissections of HS items. To establish the level at which comparisons can be made, where the relationship is other than one to one, it is necessary to aggregate the HS components of multiple ANZSPC items to the point where they can be grouped together for comparison with equivalent groups of import or export items.

Australian and New Zealand Standard Product Classification (ANZSPC).

Annex

EMBARGO: 11:30 AM (CANBERRA TIME) 14/06/2001

RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT (R&D) CLASSIFICATION FOR NEW ZEALAND USE

Harmonisation between Australia and New Zealand of Division 81 Research and Development Services was not possible because of different user requirements in each country. The NZ structure in this Annex is based on the purpose of the research being undertaken, and takes its detail from the OECD Frascati Manual. The Division 81 structure in the detailed classification is based on the Research Fields Courses and Disciplines (RFCD) classification contained in the Australian Standards Research Classification (ASRC).

81 Research and Development Services - the categories listed (81000.03 81000.66) are not appropriate in NZ, because the two unofficial classifications used in New Zealand focus on purpose of the R&D rather than the scientific discipline that performs the R&D. The following R&D breakdowns are preferred:
